Not illustrated. 1883 Excerpt: .generally, 1 think, used as meaning large building-wood. We want a term which will include wood used for any constructive purpose: such as for toys, cabinets, c. Perhaps the term log-wood, or wood in log, might answer, in contradistinction to firewood, which is not sold in logs. t First proposed by Draudt in his Die Ermittlung der Holzmatsen. If, now, we fell 1 per cent., we shall require altogether 2 sample-trees, distributed among the classes as follows: --As we cannot examine fractions of sample-trees, it is necessary to round off these figures, a procedure which will make no practical difference in the general result. We shall then get For 10-inch class. 1 sample-tree If wo had not already the full complement of trees, we might, by forming the 12 and 13-inch classes into one class, have made these classes together amount to 2 7, which, when rounded off, would have given three trees for these two classes instead of only two. Having, however, got the full number without doing this, it is better not to increase the number in the present case. It is always advisable to resort to this device for completing the percentage whenever it can be conveniently accomplished. Having determined the diameters of the model-trees, in the manner already described, and selected corresponding trees in the group, we may determine their cubic contents, either by measuring them separately, as before, or all together. In the latter case, the portions of the trees which...
